DAWES ESCAPES INJURY AS TRAIN GOES INTO DITCH

Trestle Gives Way Under The Locomotive in Mississippi Flood Region

GENERAL WAS ASLEEP

Two of Passengers Were Seriously Hurt in The Accident

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 29 (I.N.S.)—Vice-President Charles G. Dawes and his party of officials had a narrow escape from serious injury or possible death today when the engine of the vice-presidential special plunged through a trestle near Head, Miss. One man was killed and two seriously injured.

The train was returning to Memphis from Greenville, where Vice-President Dawes last night addressed the State American Legion Convention.

Vice-President Dawes and Charles Markham, chairman of the board of the Illinois Central Railroad, were sleeping in a special car on the train and were not awakened until after the crash.

Mayor Paine, of Memphis, and other city officials were badly shaken up.

Sam P. Jones, engineer, Memphis, was killed and Henry Fletcher, Greenville, and J. F. Horton, fireman, Memphis, were seriously injured.

A major catastrophe was prevented only because the train was proceeding under slow orders. The timber of a trestle gave way and the engine plunged into a deep ditch of 18 feet of water.

Had the train been moving fast the entire train would have followed the engine in its plunge. This territory was thoroughly inundated by the recent floods. The accident occurred about 1.30 o'clock this morning.

DEMONSTRATE METHOD TO EXTERMINATE BEETLE

Millions of the Pests Are Lured To Their Death

EXPERTS ARE PLEASED

Japanese beetles by the thousands, by the millions, were lured to their death in a test of newly developed exterminating methods yesterday.

A cloyingly sweet mixture was sprayed into a tree; a gentle breeze wafted its perfume outwards, and the watchers, State and Federal agricultural and entomological officials waited.

Ten minutes passed, fifteen minutes, and then they began coming. From all directions a veritable cloud of the gleaming-winged insects converged, billow upon billow, until the tree was a swarming, crawling, mass. From as far as the scent would carry the beetles hastened to their end.

A few more minutes elapsed and the tree was sprayed again but this time it was a deadly, acrid-smelling poison that was hurled into the foliage. Things began to happen.

Slowly at first and then like the pattering of hailstones the beetles began falling. For five minutes they continued dropping, some of them already lifeless, others able to crawl only a few inches before they died. At the end of that time the officials scooped up eight quarts of them, or more than 30,000 beetles, the victims of one double-spraying.

The test, held on a small grass island of the Roosevelt boulevard, between Oxford circle and Robbins avenue, Philadelphia, was the first combined State and Federal trial of the use of geraniol (the sweet-smelling attractant) and pryethrum soap (the deadly killer). Several hundred farmers and truck gardeners—representative of the thousands of tillers of the soil of half a dozen Eastern States whose very livelihood is being menaced by the pests—stood by to observe results.

The officials expressed satisfaction over the test. They agreed that "it appears to be the best thing yet for attacking the pests on a large scale."

Charles D. Jordan, Secretary of Agriculture of Pennsylvania, who was an interested onlooker, said he believed tremendous warfare against the beetles might be waged with this method, providing it was worked on a community basis. Cities, towns and villages, he said, should undertake to put the method in operation on a large scale.

Lorren B. Smith, senior entomologist of the United States Department of Agriculture, who was superintending operations, said he saw distinct lessening of the beetle pest by means of this double spraying. He pointed out that a small community might draw off virtually its whole beetle population and kill it in an afternoon.

"Spray one tree in an orchard, and you take the beetles from the whole orchard," he said. "Spray one tree near a wheat field and you take all the beetles from the field. With one spraying you can kill upwards of 100,000 of them."

TULLYTOWN CARNIVAL

Everything is in readiness for the second annual carnival to be given by Tullytown A. A. on the grounds of Tullytown Public School tonight and tomorrow evening. Many special features have been planned for this affair. Ike Saylor, of Trenton, will furnish entertainment. There will be plenty of barkers. Refreshments will also be for sale. The committee in charge is composed of William Sweeney, Pierson Burton, Carman DiCicio, William Swangler and Earl Nickerson.

Do You Know That--- it is not legally possible to establish through-traffic highways in Pennsylvania until after January 1, 1928, at which time authority to create such highways will be possessed by the State Highway Department and all Pennsylvania cities.

LOWER SECTION OF BUCKS IS INTERESTING TO "PATHFINDER"

Day's Trip Includes Visit Through Bristol To Pennsbury, Stopping En Route at "Schuylkill Fishing Club Of the State in Schuylkill"

THE Philadelphia Bulletin's Pathfinder in an article published recently described an interesting auto tour through Bucks County. It reads as follows:

Off the pneumatic tire-worn highways on a dusty gravel road rarely traveled by motorists lies Pennsbury, once the estate of William Penn, first English proprietary owner of Pennsylvania, on the banks of the Delaware in Bucks County north of Tullytown.

Historically inclined sightseers have worn no paths to this spot as to the revered Mt. Vernon home of George Washington. And in a few years it will be impossible to view the former rich acres of Pennsbury for with the march of industrial progress these fields and hills which once knew the founder as owner and for years as occupant will disappear beneath the waters of the Delaware River.

A company has purchased what remains of the estate and will shortly begin opening up channels by means of which dredges will excavate the sand deposits under the farm lands. Parts of Penn's original estate are already under water and the sand is being removed for various industrial purposes such as the making of concrete. But the company has promised the Bucks County Historical Society that it will set aside a portion of the land upon which is to be placed an appropriate marker. The marker will probably indicate the location of the Penn estate and will stand long after the waters of the river flow over the Founder's homestead. Colonel Henry D. Paxon, of Holicong, Pa., vice-president of the Bucks County Historical Society and member of the State Historical Commission, and Charles Henry Moon, of Langhorne, have been in communication with the company concerning the setting aside of the market site.

With Pennsbury as his goal the Pathfinder this week rolled north on Broad street to the Boulevard, turning right there and proceeding to Grant avenue, where again turning right we proceed to Frankford avenue, and upon that highway turning left. An interesting side trip, but one it is useless to take unprovided with a pass signed by Judge J. Willis Martin to visit the oldest social club in the world, "The Schuylkill Fishing Company of the State in Schuylkill," continues along Grant avenue to State road, where, turning right and proceeding to Distillery lane, we come to the entrance to the club, on our right. A short distance north of the club Street road to the left brings us back to Frankford avenue, which by this time, at Eddington, becomes known as the Bristol pike.

The "Schuylkill Fishing Club of the State in Schuylkill" was founded in 1732 and its "castle" stood on the west bank of the Schuylkill river just north of the Girard avenue bridge. Damming of the river and the coming manufacturing plants to the banks of the river forced the club to move its headquarters to the Eddington location. Judge Martin is the club's governor. Its other officers are a sheriff, a coroner and a secretary. The members are called citizens. Interesting trophies in the possession of the club nclude its seal, a pewter platter once used at the board of William Penn and various mounts of fish and other game captured by the members. But the club is not open to visitors and cannot be seen without special permission from the Governor.

Continuing to scenes less rigidly guarded from the gaze of the curious we proceed on the Bristol pike to Bristol, pulling up at the old Municipal Building in the centre of the town on the Bristol to Morrisville highway. The building is a tiny one with a diminutive clock tower perched atop it and we are not surprised to learn that it was erected in 1831 in six weeks. It seems some public spirited citizen in his will directed $200 be set aside for the purchase of a clock for the borough's Municipal Building. The legacy remained forgotten and unused until six weeks before the validity of the st pulation in the will would have expired. At that time Bristol had no town hall and in order to gain the clock money it was hastily decided to build one and one was just as hastily erected and the clock duly installed in its tower. The mechanism of the clock was simple and its accuracy was unrivaled for ninety years. A few years ago the Municipal Building was remodeled into a police headquarters. The clock was removed and the more valuable parts of it are now in the possession of Christopher Webber, of Bristol.

Continuing on the Bristol pike we come to Tullytown and a mile beyond the town turn right over a gravel road, proceeding over a winding course by it to the land which leads to the gates guarding the Robert Crozer mansion, built on the site of the original Penn manor. Here a marker has been erected by the Bucks County Historical Society which relates all that is known concerning the farm we are now on.

The manor house was erected in 1682-83 upon plans laid down by Penn himself and with materials which he had sent from England. The original manor contained some 8,000 acres. Through it into the Delaware ran the Sepassing creek, of the Indians. This creek Penn named for the ship which brought him to America, Welcome Creek. The manor contained all the land in the angle of the river where it turns from its eastwardly course to flow south and west. In the river in full view of the Penn house stood Newbold's Island.

Level and fertile today these lands offer us excellent facilities for farming as they did in the closing days of the seventeenth century. Even before the coming of Penn the utility of the fields as farm sites tempted twenty-four of the leading Swedish settlers, the founders of the original white colonies on the Delaware within the confines of the present State of Pennsylvania, to seek the allocation to them of this land. These settlers petitioned the colonial court to grant them lots on what six years later became with the arrival of Penn the Governor's manor.

Penn, we read, was disappointed with the structure erected for his occupation and directed various changes be made. Among the "modern" conveniences of the day with which the house was fitted was one which is believed to have been responsible for its quick decay. On the roof was constructed a lead reservoir for catching rain water. This leaked and caused the house to become uninhabitable. It was torn down during the days of the Revolution and the land passed to the ownership of Robert Crozer. He erected on the foundations of the old manor

PLAN FLOWER EXHIBIT; TO BE GREATEST EVER

Annual Show To Be Held Here September 14th And 15th

COMMITTEE IS NAMED

Bristol is to again have a flower show. This was decided, last night, at a meeting of the Bristol Dahlia Association. The tentative dates fixed are September 14th and 15th. These dates may be changed, however, at a later time.

These flower shows in the past, have proven very successful affairs and have awakened a keen interest in flowers in this section. The wide variety and the choice blooms have surprised all who have viewed the exhibits. It is anticipated that the exhibits this year will exceed all previous showings.

At the meeting last night various plans were discussed and it was decided to ask all who are interested to make suggestions. If you have a suggestion to make communicate with any member of the committee.

The committee named is as follows: Arthur Seyfert, M. D. Harrison, D. T. Ellis, Alexander Hall, Miss Eunice Williams. William Johnson will act as the secretary as he did last year in such an efficient manner.

—Mrs. Lawrence E. Machette and daughter, Ethel, of 520 Radcliffe street, were Tuesday luncheon guests of Mrs. Caroline Purdy, of Holmesburg, Pa.

OUR INVITATION ACCEPTED

(EDITORIAL)

UNDER the heading "Quakertown Invited to Inspect Bristol's 'White Way'," followed by a sub-heading, "An Invitation We Feel Bound to Accept," the Quakertown Free Press of July 21st reprinted the Courier's editorial of the 19th, and, as indicated by the headlines, accepted the invitation to inspect our boulevard system of lighting and other public improvements.

This is very gratifying to the Courier, as we are sure it will be to the Burgess, Borough Council, and the citizens of Bristol.

The acceptance is in the form of an editorial note by Mr. Meredith, appended to the reprint of the Courier's invitation. The note reads as follows:

> "The Visitation Caravan will be organized, Courier, and include Rotary, Kiwanis, Chamber of Commerce Presidents, and Chief Rhoads. Evening meeting with lunch. Here's hoping the lights work well the night 'we-all' come. I thank you."
> —Ed.

Splendid! The "Caravan" promises to be both representative and comprehensive, and that is as we had hoped it would be. Mr. Meredith is always thorough.

The contract is hereby validated, and we shall now get down to details with Borough Council and the business organizations of Bristol.

Everyone should profit from such an inspection and exchange of opinion.

TRENTON CHOIR BOY DROWNS IN RIVER

Youth, 11, Was Enjoying Swimming Party Held At Washington Crossing

LIVED WITH HIS AUNT

TRENTON, N. J., July 29.—Leroy Bloom, aged 11 years, of 160 Hoffman avenue, Trenton, was drowned in the Delaware River on the Pennsylvania shore near Washington Crossing about 8 o'clock last evening.

The lad was with a swimming party of ten chums, all members of the Grace Baptist Church Boys' Club, in charge of Charles Sheppard, aged 32, of 64 Maple avenue. The Rev. O. W. Henderson, pastor of the church at West State street and Hermitage avenue, broke the sad news to relatives of the boy.

The Bloom boy resided with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ristow, of Hoffman avenue. The aunt suffered a complete collapse when notified of the tragedy and was reported as in a rather serious condition late last night. Young Bloom is said to be survived by his father, Leroy Bloom, formerly of Hoffman avenue, and who later removed to Pennington, as well as a brother, Robert Bloom, aged 10 years.

It is said that Sheppard and two of the boys' club members made an effort to rescue young Bloom, but found themselves in difficulty and in danger of losing their own lives, so that they had to abandon the attempt.

The two other boys, according to Sheppard, were Herbert Hough and Irving Holmes, whose addresses he did not know. Sheppard was deeply affected by the tragedy and was reluctant to talk of the affair, making his report to the authorities who investigated. The relatives of the boy said they believed Sheppard must have done all in his power to save the victim.

Unable to locate the lad immediately after he disappeared in the water, which is not very deep at present, but which has a fairly swift current because of recent heavy rainfalls, aid was sought from the New Jersey State Police Headquarters at Wilburtha, across the river, and from Doylestown Station of the Pennsylvania Constabulary.

Troopers O'Malley and Doyle, of the New Jersey Police, crossed the river promptly in the State Police motor-

CORNWELLS MAN IS VICTIM OF HIT-RUN DRIVER

Daniel Scheffey Run Down On Bristol Pike Near Cemetery

L E G IS FRACTURED

Companion Walking Beside Him Escapes Being Injured

The father of several children is lying in the Harriman Hospital today as the result of a hit-run accident which occurred last night at 11.45 o'clock.

The injured man is Daniel Scheffey, Cornwells Heights.

Scheffey, together with Dominick Crane, of Croydon, had stayed at his employment in Bristol until a late hour last evening, and commenced walking to the south of Bristol while waiting for a trolley car.

Scheffey and his companion stated today that they were well to the right side of the road when a machine, driven at a high rate of speed, and traveling in the direction of Philadelphia, struck Scheffey who was walking on the outside.

The victim was picked up by his companion about thirty feet from where the machine struck him, having been either dragged or thrown. Passing autoists brought him to the Harriman Hospital where it was found he has a compound fracture of the bones of the right leg, and several lacerations about the head and body.

The car is described as being a large blue machine and according to Crane it was traveling at a terrific rate of speed along the highway. Crane was wearing a white shirt which he says should have showed up in the glare of the autoist's headlights.

The accident happened near the Bristol cemetery.

TRADE NOTES

Passersby are today noting the excellent line of goods displayed in the show window at Wagman's Fashion Corner, Wood and Mill streets, the lengthy line being reduced to an extremely low price level.

Dresses are shown in plain or figured voile, taffetta and rayon. The millinery display is pleasing and the array is varied. Mr. Wagman has likewise reduced his supply of boys' wash suits and sport blouses, any opportunities missed in this line being a distinct loss to the individual needing same. The articles for sale in this clearance sale at the Mill street establishment are many and varied and a trip of inspection will pay any individual.

At Tomesani's Electrical Service, 322 Mill street, there is on display the A. B. C. Spinner, the electric washer which spins away dirt and spins away water. It is stated by Mr. Tomesani that 16 pounds of clothes will be washed and dried by the Spinner in five minutes. An invitation for a demonstration will be gladly accepted.

Residents of Bristol should bear in mind the August furniture sale at the headquarters of the Factors-to-You Furniture Company, 225 Mill street. As previously stated the group of house furnishings is a pleasing one built for wear, and the selection is wide. Now is the time of year to buy that long-wanted suite of furniture or few odd pieces.

Harry Popkin who is conducting a closing-out sale at his establishment on Dorrance street, is advertising some splendid buys.

Among the listings are all kinds of dress and sport shoes for women, with all kinds of leathers. Some exceptionally pleasing slippers are shown in the sliding buckle effect.

Boys' play shoes are greatly reduced, and the dress and work shoes for men have long wearing qualities.

In the tenth annual sale, which commences at Smith's Model Shop today and will last for 14 days, there are offered many bargains in Pora-Chine Twill coats in many shades. These garments are lined with silk.

Among the offerings are also silk hosiery; lingerie such as step-ins, princess slips, chemise, Lady Sealpax, etc. Children's rompers, creepers, and overalls are shown in neat styles and patterns. These are likewise to be had far below the usual price.

Ladies' dresses are in georgette, flat crepe and satin. The colors are varied and pleasing, and will delight the young miss as well as the matron.

CASTES AND STAGNATION

India is the most backward of the large countries of the world; more backward even than China and Russia. The natives of India retain the same customs and living conditions today that characterized their country since the beginning of recorded history. Except in the foreign sections of the large cities the country is stagnated, without sign of progress or change.

The backwardness that characterizes India is blamed in large part on the country's strict observance of the isolating barriers of its many creeds and castes. In the eyes of the world India has always been the country of races, creeds, castes and outcastes. Nowhere else in the world are there so many class divisions and class divisions so closely drawn and rigidly enforced and observed.

Zavel Zimand, writing in the New York Times, says: "Of the 220,000,000 Hindu population, 53,000,000 form what are known as the depressed classes or outcasts, whose very touch is deemed pollution by the caste people. There are thousands and thousands of castes so differentiated from each other that what was once a source of strength for the country has now become one of its main sources of weakness."

In the United States classes are determined only by social position and the individual changes his classification as he improves his economic standing. The classes of India are fixed by religious decree and the individual must die a member of that caste or outcaste in which he or she was born. The class lines of the Hindu even determine what occupation the member must pursue. America has advanced because it has broken down class distinction. India remains at a standstill because she prefers her castes and outcastes to progress.

NO CAUSE FOR WORRY

There is always more or less worry connected with money. Those of us who do not have it worry about getting it, and those of us who have it are often put to a great deal of worry in hanging on to it. In addition to this no little worry is brought on by the desire to make a jitney grow where only a penny grew before. It seems as though poets and philosophers have conspired to bring money into disrepute, so anxious are they to tell us that the mere possession of it is a great burden.

In more recent times there has come to us the warning that money carries germs. Germ experts even went so far as to demonstrate that a bank clerk's occupation was particularly hazardous because he handles so much money. But now this dread has been dispelled. After exhaustive investigation on the subject of money as germ carriers two Illinois University experts assure us that this danger has been greatly exaggerated. It seems that the metals from which coins are made act as destroyers of bacteria.

This relieves us of the worry connected with the handling of money. The next thing for some expert to do is to tell us how we may be relieved of our worries in trying to get hold of it.

In this free and glorious country even the boy whose parents have named him Percy can make a name for himself.

As laws increase, taxes increase with them. Fewer laws, fewer taxes.

What Every Girl Should Know

By GISA PRUCHONE

Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

"WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW," with Patsy Ruth Miller, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Mary "Elaine" Sullivan—slender, beautiful, red-headed—is an orphan. Wally Mason, a young reporter, loves Mary. But she disbelieves in love. Mary keeps house for her brothers, Bobby and David. David is sentenced to prison for an auto fatality. The Charity Department takes Bobby. Wally proposes; but Mary goes to New York, gets a cloakroom job in a night club. It is raided. Mary is adjudged to have criminal influences, and is sentenced to a reform school. She gets a letter from Bobby, who is ill; and runs away to visit him.

"I won't, Mary. I promise you I won't."

Arthur Graham, grinning. "He won't, Mary, he promises you he won't."

Mary, shaking her head at Arthur while her hair swung. "You aid and abet him, and aid and abet him till I swear there'll be no living with him when we get home."

"Mary, just this once."

"Just this once, then," agreed Mary, and bent to kiss him where the hair clung to his moist little forehead. Why had she come, then, if not for "just this once?" Why the breathless escape from the Home, if not for "just this once?" Why the original trip to New York if not for the pleading in young Robert's eyes, and the hurt that fled from the little chest with the arrival of Mary?

"Well, then, Robert," she plumped his cushions, and said, "And you try to sleep."

"I will sleep, Mary. I will."

"Very well, then." She took a deep breath. "There I was!" dramatically.

"There you were!" crowed young Robert. The sparkle in his eyes that carried him along the road to health.

He pointed out the small white cottage.

"—at the outside of that gate, and Maria due at any moment—"

"With a hue and a cry, Mary!"

"—and Maria due at any moment with a hue and a cry. But nothing happened. It didn't seem true that I had escaped with nobody the wiser, but it was, and after waiting a few minutes behind the hedges at the side of the road, and hearing the quiet continue, I crept into a space between the great boulder and the scraggly hedges that hadn't been trimmed because they were so far behind the Home, and stayed there till dark."

"When you were missed, Mary?"

"When I was missed, Robert. But though I heard them leaving the Home with flashlights and calling cars to help search for me, I wasn't worried at all, because I felt—I knew they wouldn't think of beginning to look so close. It seemed hours to me, but I learned later that it was soon after—they returned, and I heard the voice of Maria saying that it was useless to continue tonight. That she knew where I had gone and could find me there. But I didn't care, young Robert, if only I could get here. After that they could do what they pleased."

"And you met the knight in the gleaming armor then, Mary?"

"Yes," Mary laughed, "then I met the knight in the armor that gleamed silver white in the light of the moon."

"And it was just a little ol' Ford, Mary!"

"Exactly. But the knight's heart was made of gold."

"Exactly," Robert repeated seriously.

"And I put on the raincoat he gave me. And sat with him in the front seat. And came to you in the morning—and that's positively all. But you're not asleep, Robert, and now what shall we do to you?"

"I will sleep, Mary, I will," and he did, while Arthur Graham and Mary sat at either side of the bed and watched.

"And what now, Mary Sullivan?" asked Arthur Graham.

"You don't mind if I cry?" asked Mary in response.

"I don't mind anything, if it will relieve you, of course. But why cry and redden those very lovely eyes?"

"I must do something," said Mary, and came to stand before him. "I must do something to show how you've made me feel again. I am alive, because of you. I am whole again and have recovered my laugh. That is why I want to cry."

And she did, softly, so that Robert might not wake. There was none to hear but Arthur Graham, and he heard not the sobs, but wondered that such indomitable spirit should be found in one girl.

"You see," said Mary, in explanation, as the sobs died away and the tears shone in her eyes, "you see, I've had rather a hard day."

"I gathered that it might have been hard. And a hard night, too."

"Yes."

Mary had had a hard day. But what would she have done without Graham? Harder days would have followed, doubtlessly. For one cannot come wildly from a little shaky black tin car with a voluminous raincoat dragging at one's heels and burst in upon a startled orphan asylum without dire after effects. There had been the car, and the soft hearted Abner Baker who had driven her to the city, and the raincoat which he had solicitously placed over her shoulders that the uniform gray of her dress might not be observed. And there had been the jolting night ride over the roads that led away from Bothwell. "Quickly, quickly," urged Mary's heart, and the leaping tin thing had responded through the long, black tunnel of the night that had cautiously turned to a gentle pink upon their arrival in the outskirts of the city. After that it had been simple, with Mary crouched in her seat that the red of her hair might not show, for they would surely have wired ahead. But the way had been peaceful, with the soft peace of an August dawn. Then the stop before the long, grey buildings of the Asylum, and her tearful farewell to Abner, who had muttered that it was all right and to get on in before she was spotted and if she'd write him to tell how it all came out he'd feel mighty well repaid because of the story it would make for Mamie, back home. This was just like a movie, he'd declare, and Mamie was gone on the movies, he'd tell Mary, clean gone.

After that, the deluge.

She had run to the building marked "Superintendent" and let herself in. There was no one about, the little office at the top of the three wooden steps was deserted with the calm that is the start of the day. Finding no one there she had run up the length of the walk, with the rows of cottages on either side, and met a milk-cart, the back door yawning open and revealing box upon box of white bottles. "The milk-man would know," Mary thought, and decided to wait for him, shivering in the gray cool of the morning. When he had emerged with his wire basket of empty milk-bottles under his arm she met him as he came toward the wagon.

"Please," said Mary, the anxious light making her face seem a bit paler than usual, "can you tell me—the Infirmary—can you tell me where it is?"

He pointed out the small white cottage, and watched her as she flew up the path, a small figure in the drapes of a voluminous raincoat. Within the infirmary was the same quiet that seemed to pervade the entire place. Standing there, unresolved as to which gleaming door to try, a cough broke the stillness of the cottage. There was the sound of a small body moving about restlessly in bed, and then another cough. A series of them, breaking out hollowly, seeming to splatter the silence. Robert! In an instant the door had been opened, and there in the white cot bed lay young Bob, little body asprawl as she had seen him so many times at home, one cheek sunk deep in the pillow and arms flung above his head.

Young Robert opened his eyes. It had been difficult of accomplishment of late, that comparatively simple feat. The lids were heavy and seemed to have been clamped down upon him as covers on a stove. It was so difficult, removing them, that the effort had not seemed worth while these past days. But young Robert was being held tightly against someone, and it was very strange. The nurse did not hold him tightly. Her uniform would have cut, probably. He had often imagined so, at any rate. But this was the feeling of something soft. From it poured love. Robert felt it stir in his breast, where of late there had been nothing but rasp. The feel of softness that might be Mary was worth while investigating. Most probably it would be a dream again. He had had them often. And then he managed to force the clamps from his eyes, and when he opened them—well, here she was!

HEALTHY OLD MEN AND WOMEN NEED NEVER HAVE GRAY HAIR

As Long As Color Glands Remain Normal and Active Plenty of Pigment Will Keep Hair Its Natural Shade

IF HAIR IS FADED AND STREAKED WITH GRAY BEGIN REVIVING COLOR GLANDS

Simple Tonic Starts Youthful Color Returning Again

Everybody knows if their color glands and hair roots are active and normal they will continue indefinitely to have rich, natural colored hair entirely free of gray and off-colored locks.

A doctor several years ago asked himself this question: "Why not rub a stimulating tonic into the scalp that will revive, strengthen and tone up those inactive glands so that nature in her own inimitable way will resume putting plenty of pigment into the hair tubes—surely the hair will then again resume its original, natural, beautiful shades of youth regardless of the users' age or the condition of their hair.

Remarkable Discovery

The doctor's search for a tonic that would accomplish this purpose led him into endless experiments, but the final result was worth it. He didn't want a dye or tint and it of course must be harmless and something that could be used for years and years without the slightest injury to hair or scalp.

Under the name of Lea's Hair Tonic anyone may now purchase the tonic he finally perfected. For several years now hairdressers and people scattered all over the country have been using it. Results are so natural, gradual and nice that men as well as women use it.

It doesn't stain the scalp. One's friends seldom notice the gradual change and to test what it will do one needs only to apply it a week or so to some small spot and watch results.

Users have been amazed at the younger appearance that comes with the disappearance of gray hairs from their head. If any reader desires to try a bottle of Lea's Hair Tonic on the maker's absolute guarantee of complete satisfaction they should pin a dollar bill to this advertisement and send it to the Lea's Tonic Company, Brentwood, Md., with their name and address plainly written. A generous sized bottle will be sent prepaid anywhere. Leading druggists have Lea's Hair Tonic, $1.00 per bottle. (Adv. 2.)

boat, hoping to revive the boy if he were found soon. They made a search of the waters at the drowning scene in the boat, but failed to locate the body. Nightfall came on rapidly and, being without grappling hooks as well as unable to see in the inky blackness about the stream, the officers were forced to halt their work until this morning. In the darkness the motorboat struck huge rocks in the bed of the river several times and the troopers left the boat at the scene overnight, rather than risk sinking it in a night crossing to the Jersey shore.

Within five minutes after the swimming party, in a motor car, reached the bathing scene near the Three Lanterns Inn and entered the water, young Bloom disappeared under the surface of the stream, Sheppard said. The lad made no outcry and it is not known whether he suffered cramps or what caused him to sink. The boy could swim as well as an average lad of his age, relatives said, though not considered expert. He would have been 12 years old next December.

Sheppard notified the State Police, while another spectator ran to the house of Bridgetender George Skillman, on the Jersey end of the Washington Crossing Bridge, to seek aid in finding the body. Sheppard then returned the other boys of the party to their homes here and again visited the drowning scene.

Troopers O'Malley and Doyle said Sheppard told them the drowning boy nearly pulled him under during the rescue effort and that he was compelled to free himself, in order to guard the lives of the two lads who were near young Bloom when he went down and who tried to save him also. The boys had been throwing and catching a ball while in bathing, the police say. Sheppard declared that when the other lads were taken to places of safety and he, with more rescuers, returned to the place where the Bloom boy was last seen, they were unable to find his body, although it was not yet dark with the night's approach. It is presumed the current carried the lad down the river to some extent.

The troopers and others expect to resume their search for the victim, with the aid of the motorboat, grappling hooks and swimmers, early today.

State News

CLEARFIELD, July 29 (I.N.S.)—Potatoes in Clearfield county and throughout the State are in excellent condition at present, but the advent of hot weather will make frequent spraying necessary, County Agent W. O. Mitchell declared. Diligent spraying of the crop will protect it against possible injury caused by heat, he said.

MT. CARMEL, July 29 (I.N.S.)—Mount Carmel claims one of the nation's youngest regular patrons of a beauty shop, in the person of Helen Rogers, 4. The little Miss is enjoying her second permanent wave, following a visit to the beauty shop with her mother, during which the tiny tot sat quietly for several hours while the beauty doctors worked on her hair.

She has not placed an order to have her face lifted, the beauty doctors report.

MONONGAHELA, July 29 (I.N.S.)—Boys will be boys, it is conceded, but the time-honored practice to bathe without the conventional bathing suit will not be excused by railroad detectives here as readily as some other eccentricities of youth. Consequently the officers have decreed that the members of the younger generation must wear some covering while swimming in creeks along railroad lines in this neighborhood.

"If they were going in for a marathon swim, it might be a different thing, you know," one of the officers said. "That way, they would be in the water the greater part of the time, and perhaps have a coating of grease. But as it is, they do more frolicking on the banks in the undraped than they do in swimming. The trains pass near many beaches and the boys playing on the ground without a suit is not modest, to say the least."

So the officers are going to conduct a campaign against bathing in the nude. They point out that a similar campaign last year brought forth some good results.

As far as is known, there is only one beach near Monongahela where the boys go in swimming a la nature.

house a new structure. That also passed and a third house which still stands was built. In a few years the present house and all the lands identified as having been the home domain of the Founder will disappear. Deep inroads have already been made in the lands bordering the river adjacent to the Penn estate. Except for the marker to be placed by the organization interested in preserving historical associations all trace of the Penn lands will have passed in another fifteen years.

The day is young and instead of turning to the left as we drive from the Crozer farm which would have retraced the route by which we entered the Penn estate we turn right and following the road for a short distance come out upon the banks of the Delaware. This winding road, now crossing a golf links, a mere cart track through tilled fields but always returning to the river's banks brings us into Morrisville and continuing on through the town by the river road we reach New Hope, where we turn left on the Old York road, following it through Lahaska, scene of the last encampment of the Lenni Lenape Indians in the Delaware valley from which they departed in 1775.

Through Holicong we continue our drive and to Buckingham, where we turn left at the General Greene Inn, headquarters of General Greene in 1776, and where the Bucks County Committee of Safety held many of its meetings and finally established headquarters. Following the Durham road, we pass through Wrightstown to Newtown and in the centre of the town turn right, crossing the Neshaminy creek and then turning left again following the Feasterville road through Feasterville to the Bustleton pike and this pike to the Roosevelt Boulevard and back again to Broad street.
